

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a biochip reader for reading with a detector the fluorescence image information from genes to which fluorescent substances are stuck and which are poured into biochip cells, by emitting coherent light beams such as laser light onto the cells as excitation light. The present invention aims to achieve a biochip reader that is small, cheap, and highly durable.